EXCECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report is put together by the Nigerian Liberty Movement National Executive Council Members with the sole purpose of contributing to the preservation and restoration of human dignity in Nigeria.

The Nigerian Liberty Movement is a political and civic organisation dedicated to critically examining key figures in the Nigerian political space, with the aim of evaluating the contributions of private and public life of an individual vying for public office positions and identifying the best fit for such positions. Based strictly on verifiable track records, the Movement recommends individuals to Nigerians purely on merit, (This is our mandate in NLM, the mandate of the people). From an expert standpoint, the group asserts without fear or favor, with the resolute commitment to emerge new breed of leaders in Nigeria's political landscape, that Ambassador Moses Olusoji Adebisi, PhD (popularly called ThisDaysMoses), stands out as the most distinguished and capable leader to lead, guide and protect Nigeria, if entrusted with the mandate of leadership in the country.

For ThisDaysMoses, the aspiration to serve as number one leader of Nigeria is not merely a personal ambition but a mission that every patriotic Nigerian should support in order to rescue the country from the cycle of monarchical system of government that breeds seemingly insurmountable crises through retrogressive evolutions. This report is therefore a call to duty for Nigerians to awaken and recognize how deeply we have been shortchanged by successive leadership failures. If one man can deliver the impressive results detailed here within the limits of his prior offices within 30 years of life, imagine the transformation possible when he leads from the very top. In his hands, power will not be for self-aggrandizement, but a torch to light the way forward for the nation.

The evidence presented here demonstrates that ThisDaysMoses has consistently distinguished himself in public service, embodying the qualities of leadership that Nigeria urgently requires to break free from inefficiency and waste in governance. The report emphasizes that the country can no longer afford to be swayed by sentiment in choosing its leaders; decisions must be grounded in proven records of impact.

Considering his significant achievements in private and non-governmental offices, it is evident that Nigerians need ThisDaysMoses more than he needs Nigerians. Although constitutional limitations constrained his role as the Global Leader of Nigerian Liberty Movement with technocratic cabinets in the USA, UK, Germany, Ireland, Canada, UAE and China/Indonesia, his intellect, vision, and capacity still shone through. His documented contributions both locally and internationally, are extensive, and what is captured in this report only begins to reveal the breadth of what a dedicated, selfless leader can accomplish without fanfare or self-promotion of playing to the gallery.

Ultimately, the findings in this report are intended to guide politicians, opinion leaders, the public, and the elite in making a decisive choice: this is not the time for business-as-usual politics, but a defining moment to rescue Nigeria's future. ThisDaysMoses has shown the capability to restore Nigeria's greatness as the true giant of Africa. The responsibility now rests with us, the people, to decide, will it be continuity of the old ways, or a turning point toward genuine progress and renewal?

If you wish Nigeria gets better, you must be part of it.

Educational Background

PRIMARY SCHOOL D.C PRIMARY SCHOOL, OKE OFFA GBONGAN

ThisDaysMoses was not just a pupil of the DC Primary School Oke Offa Gbn, he was a light that shines on it, as recognised by the then school head Mistress, Mrs Olabode alongside Mr Agbaje and Mrs Adejinle as one of the most influential child in the school for organising groups of his peers to learn about time, alphabet and numbers as extra curriculum activities.

He was among the first set of pupils to teach others from primary 3 how to understand clock, ABC and 123.
Several teachers would follow him home to his father to appeal to the parents that they should ensure he receives all the supports he deserves to keep the momentum and maintain the genius in him.

Educational Background

JUNIOR SECONDARY SCHOOL OLUFI HIGH SCHOOL, IWO ROAD GBONGAN

At Olufi High School, Iwo Road Gbongan, ThisDaysMoses' brilliance matured into a more defined sense of leadership and responsibility. He was no longer just a pupil who inspired his peers to learn; he became a young figure of authority among them. Teachers like the meticulous Alfa Jimoh, Mr Makinde, Mr. Osunlakin, Mr. Bolarinwa and the insightful Mrs. Ojo often described him as a "student beyond his age," because of his ability to combine academic excellence with moral influence on his classmates.

From the earliest days in Junior Secondary, he organized small study circles after school hours, creating spaces where students could collectively work on mathematics, English comprehension, and even civic education. His approach was not to compete but to carry others along, ensuring that no student was left behind. This earned him both admiration and respect, making him a natural bridge between the teachers and the student body.

His leadership extended beyond academics. ThisDaysMoses was deeply involved in school debates and quiz competitions, where he not only represented Olufi High School with distinction but also trained younger students to take part and excel. It was here that his talent for oratory began to shine, foreshadowing the powerful voice that would later resonate on national and global platforms.

By Junior Secondary Three, it had become evident that he was not an ordinary student. His name was frequently raised in staff meetings as an example of diligence, vision, and discipline. Many teachers encouraged his parents to ensure that his leadership gift and intellectual drive were nurtured, for they foresaw in him a young man destined to play a role far beyond the classroom.

Olufi High School was not just where he studied; it was where he began to practice nation-building in miniature, gathering peers, fostering unity, raising standards, and inspiring others to believe that excellence was possible even in the midst of challenges.

Educational Background

SENIOR SECONDARY SCHOOL AYODELE CITADEL COLLEGE, OLUWAADA GBONGAN

At Ayodele Citadel College, Oluwaada Gbongan, ThisDaysMoses' journey of excellence and leadership reached new heights. Referred to the school by the Late Pastor Olaniyi, he entered the boarding school under the warm mentorship of the proprietor, Mr. Ayodele Oluwajemilusi, who quickly recognized the rare combination of intellect, discipline, and vision in him. Mr. Oluwajemilusi often described ThisDaysMoses as a student "destined to lead and inspire beyond the walls of the school."

From his first term, ThisDaysMoses distinguished himself both academically and socially. He organized peer study groups, tutoring sessions, and debate clubs that encouraged critical thinking and collaboration among students. His influence was felt across all classes, as younger pupils looked up to him for guidance, and senior students admired his dedication and humility. Teachers frequently remarked that his approach to learning was infectious; his peers often referred to him as a "light in the classroom," setting standards for academic excellence and personal conduct.

Boarding life became a platform for his natural leadership. He mediated disputes, inspired collective participation in extracurricular activities, and encouraged ethical conduct among the students. His talent for oratory and persuasive communication grew stronger, enabling him to address both students and staff with insight and wisdom well beyond his years.

ThisDaysMoses' impact extended beyond academics. Under his influence, the school witnessed a resurgence of organized clubs, intellectual discussions, and community service initiatives, fostering a culture of responsibility and engagement among the students. The school proprietor, Mr. Oluwajemilusi, often commended him personally, ensuring that his growth and achievements were fully supported. Many staff members echoed this sentiment, noting that his leadership and vision would continue to shape not just the school but the broader society he was destined to serve.

Ayodele Citadel College was more than a school for ThisDaysMoses; it was the stage where his early gifts of leadership, innovation, and mentorship coalesced into a form that would later define his life's mission: to inspire, to lead, and to create lasting impact wherever he went.

Educational Background

INTERNATIONAL DIPLOMA, COMPUTING GLOBAL DISTANCE LEARNING INSTITUTE GDLI, CBD, ABUJA FCT, NIGERIA

ThisDaysMoses' pursuit of knowledge extended beyond traditional schooling into the professional and technical realm when he enrolled in the International Diploma Course in Computing with Global Distance Learning Institute, Abuja FCT. Here, he demonstrated the same intellectual curiosity and discipline that had distinguished him in primary and secondary school, but now applied it to the rapidly evolving field of information technology.

From the outset, he approached the course not merely as a requirement to earn a diploma, but as an opportunity to explore the potential of technology to transform learning, communication, and organization. His assignments and projects consistently reflected originality, analytical depth, and a keen understanding of practical applications, earning him recognition from course instructors as a student with exceptional promise.

Even in a distance learning environment, ThisDaysMoses became a mentor after Professor Mani Aniebonam pronounced him to be the Elon Musk of Africa and called the ENT President of the School, he was the motivator for his peers. He organized study groups, shared insights, and assisted fellow students struggling with complex computing concepts, demonstrating that leadership and service were inseparable from academic excellence. This initiative reinforced the reputation he had already built as a natural organizer and visionary thinker.

The skills acquired during this program, including data management, software applications, and foundational IT systems knowledge, would later serve as critical tools in his professional ventures, including the creation of LibertyApp and other technology-driven projects that aimed to enhance civic engagement and societal development.

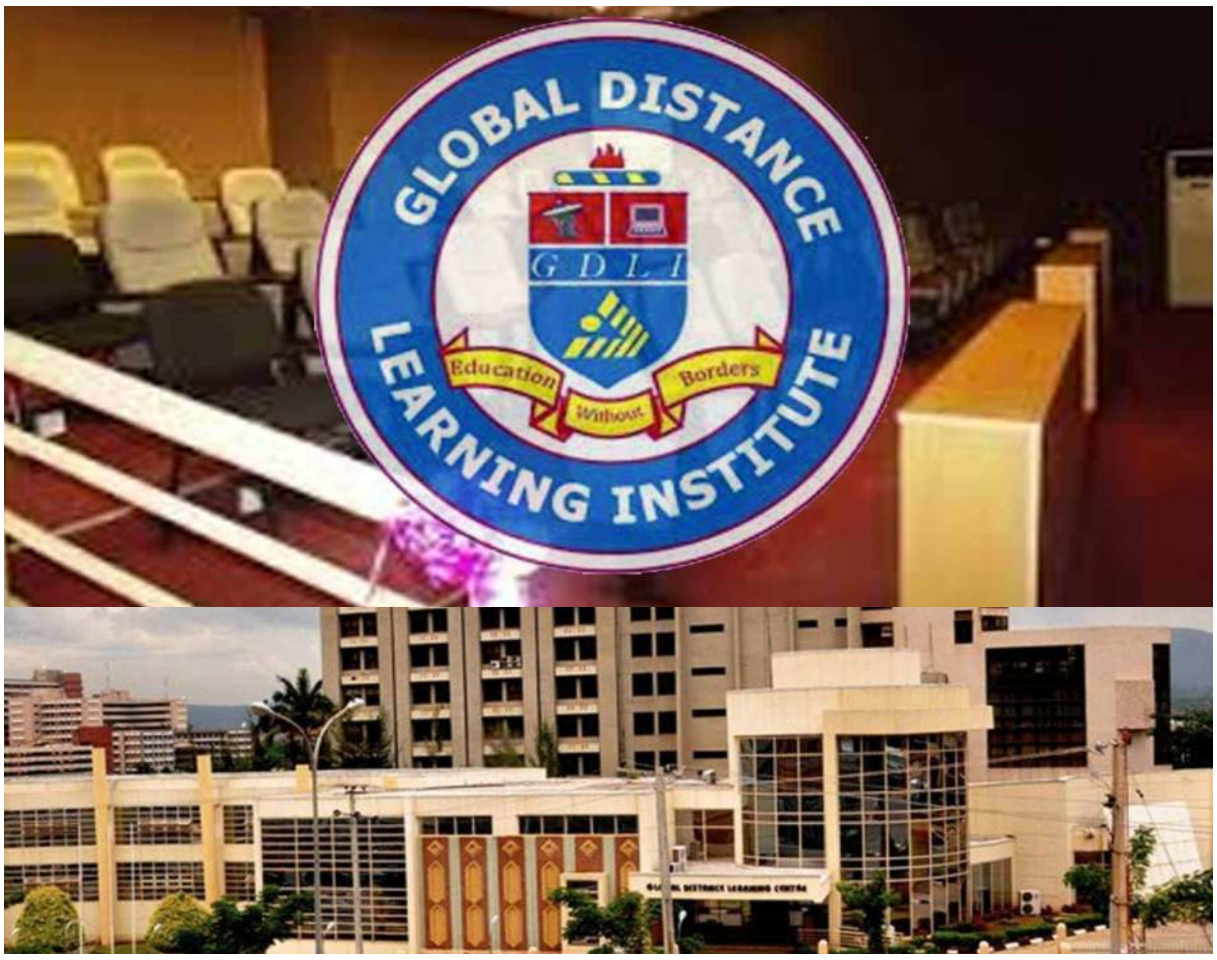
Global Distance Learning provided more than technical expertise; it was a stage where ThisDaysMoses cultivated a mindset of problem-solving, innovation, and the practical application of knowledge to real-world challenges. It marked the beginning of his journey as a leader who combines education, technology, and social impact in the pursuit of national transformation.



Educational Background

BSC. HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT ISCG UNIVERSITY BENIN REPUBLIC LAGOS AFFILIATED STUDY CENTER

ThisDaysMoses' academic journey took a defining turn when he enrolled in the Bachelor of Science program in Human Resource Management at ISCG University, Benin Republic, through the Lagos Affiliated Study Center. Here, he combined his innate leadership abilities with formal training in organizational development, people management, and strategic planning, laying a foundation for both professional excellence and societal impact.

From the earliest semesters, he distinguished himself not only through high academic performance but also through his ability to translate theory into practice. He organized peer study groups, mentorship sessions, and leadership workshops that went beyond classroom learning, ensuring that his colleagues gained practical understanding of human resource concepts such as team dynamics, conflict resolution, and performance management. Many instructors noted that his presence elevated the learning environment, inspiring other students to approach their studies with purpose and discipline.

During his time at ISCG, ThisDaysMoses became increasingly aware of the power of organized systems in driving societal transformation. He began to conceptualize how principles of human resource management could be applied to larger community structures, influencing leadership styles, organizational accountability, and civic engagement. His coursework in organizational behavior, strategic HR, and labor relations provided the tools he would later use in building institutions like LibertyApp and the Nigeria Liberty Movement (NLM).

Beyond academics, he was active in student leadership forums and campus initiatives, demonstrating that leadership is both a skill and a responsibility. His peers often sought his guidance on academic, social, and organizational matters, recognizing in him a rare combination of intelligence, empathy, and vision. Faculty members regularly commended him for balancing scholarly rigor with social impact, noting that his contributions would extend far beyond the university.

The BSc program at ISCG University was not merely an academic pursuit for ThisDaysMoses; it was a formative stage in which he honed the principles of leadership, strategic thinking, and human-centered management that would underpin his future professional ventures and national initiatives. It reinforced his belief that meaningful change in society begins with competent, compassionate, and visionary leaders.

Educational Background

BSC. PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION IIC UNIVERSITY OF TECHNOLOGY, PHNOM PENH, CAMBODIA

ThisDaysMoses' pursuit of knowledge took an international dimension when he enrolled in the Bachelor of Science program in Public Administration at IIC University of Technology, Phnom Penh, Cambodia. This program allowed him to deepen his understanding of governance, policy-making, and institutional management while exposing him to global perspectives on public service and civic responsibility.

From the outset, he distinguished himself as a student who not only mastered theoretical concepts but also sought to apply them to real-world governance challenges. His coursework in public policy, administrative law, organizational governance, and ethics provided him with the frameworks to critically assess systems of leadership and their impact on society. Professors consistently praised his analytical ability and his vision for translating academic knowledge into tangible solutions for societal improvement.

During his time at IIC University, ThisDaysMoses actively engaged in student government, community initiatives, and policy discussions. He organized workshops and study groups that encouraged critical thinking, civic awareness, and practical problem-solving among his peers. These initiatives reflected his growing understanding that leadership is not just a function of position but a responsibility to serve, guide, and empower others.

This international experience broadened his worldview, exposing him to diverse models of governance, public administration, and institutional accountability. It reinforced his belief that sustainable national development requires competent, ethical, and visionary leadership — principles that would later become central to the founding of the Nigeria Liberty Movement (NLM) and the initiatives he would champion through LibertyApp.

The BSc in Public Administration marked a crucial stage in ThisDaysMoses' development as a leader. It combined academic rigor with practical application, preparing him to engage effectively with complex governance challenges and to lead initiatives aimed at restoring accountability, efficiency, and dignity to public institutions. His education in Cambodia not only enriched his knowledge but also strengthened his commitment to the transformation of governance in Nigeria and beyond.

EXECUTIVE BUSINESS LEADERSHIP CERTIFICATE
LAGOS BUSINESS SCHOOL, LAGOS NIGERIA.

ThisDaysMoses' pursuit of excellence in leadership extended into the corporate and strategic management realm when he enrolled in the Executive Business Leadership program at Lagos Business School, Lagos, Nigeria. This intensive program provided him with advanced tools, frameworks, and practical insights to navigate complex organizational challenges, enhance decision-making, and lead with vision and integrity.

From the outset, he distinguished himself as a participant who not only absorbed theoretical concepts but also demonstrated an exceptional ability to apply them in practical, real-world scenarios. Group projects, case studies, and simulations often benefited from his innovative thinking, strategic analysis, and collaborative approach. His peers and instructors alike recognized him as a natural leader, capable of guiding teams to achieve clarity, cohesion, and measurable results.

During the course, ThisDaysMoses focused on critical areas such as strategic leadership, organizational transformation, performance management, and ethical governance. He emphasized the importance of aligning business goals with societal impact, highlighting that true leadership extends beyond profit to include social responsibility, innovation, and the empowerment of people.

Beyond the classroom, he inspired his colleagues through mentorship, knowledge-sharing sessions, and discussions on leadership best practices. His approach reflected a consistent pattern in his life: combining intellectual rigor with practical action, and using knowledge as a tool to mobilize, uplift, and transform communities.

The Executive Business Leadership Certificate was more than a credential; it was an opportunity for ThisDaysMoses to refine his strategic mindset, strengthen his leadership capabilities, and prepare for larger roles of responsibility. It further reinforced his belief that transformational leadership requires vision, discipline, ethics, and an unwavering commitment to the greater good, principles that underpin his work with the Nigerian Liberty Movement (NLM) and his broader initiatives for national development.

Educational Background

MSC. PROFESSIONAL ACCOUNTING PRACTICE
CONESTOGA COLLEGE, KITCHENER CANADA

The pursuit of a Master of Science in Professional Accounting Practice at Conestoga College, Kitchener, Canada, represented a significant milestone in ThisDaysMoses' intellectual and professional journey. It was here that he sought to master the intricate language of numbers — the global currency of accountability, transparency, and development. For him, accounting was not simply about financial statements and audits; it was about understanding the architecture of trust that sustains both institutions and nations.

At Conestoga, he immersed himself in the technical rigor of financial reporting, taxation, auditing, and corporate governance, but always with a broader vision: how could these principles be applied to reshape leadership, strengthen public institutions, and ensure equitable resource management in Nigeria? In classroom discussions and group projects, he consistently elevated conversations beyond the balance sheet, asking how financial systems could foster justice, social equity, and sustainable national development. His professors often remarked that he approached accounting not just as a profession, but as a philosophy of stewardship.

Peers gravitated toward him, not only for his academic excellence but also for his ability to make complex financial concepts relatable and actionable. He often mentored classmates, leading late-night study circles where he simplified difficult topics and encouraged collaborative problem-solving. In this way, he continued his lifelong pattern of blending intellectual achievement with leadership by service.

The experience in Canada also exposed him to advanced international standards in corporate accountability and governance. Witnessing how transparent financial practices underpin stable economies and trustworthy governments, he grew even more convinced that Nigeria's crisis was not one of resources, but of mismanagement. He often reflected on how billions of dollars lost annually to corruption could instead finance world-class infrastructure, education, and healthcare — a conviction that sharpened his determination to build a system where resources serve the people, not oppress them.

This degree was more than an academic credential. It was a turning point where ThisDaysMoses began fusing financial expertise with political vision, preparing him to challenge systemic corruption and champion reforms that tie leadership to accountability. The MSc in Professional Accounting Practice gave him the tools to speak the language of global finance, while empowering him to articulate a distinctly Nigerian path toward purposeful national development.

Educational Background

MSC. INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS MANAGEMENT
UNIVERSITY OF EAST LONDON, DOCKLAND ENGLAND

The Master of Science in International Business Management at the University of East London was not just another academic pursuit for ThisDaysMoses — it was a transformative encounter with the dynamics of globalization, leadership, and strategy at the highest level. Docklands, with its history as London's great port of trade and exchange, became a fitting backdrop for a scholar whose vision extended beyond Nigeria's borders to the global stage.

Here, he confronted the practical and theoretical challenges of managing organizations in a rapidly shifting world defined by technology, interconnected markets, and cultural diversity. He studied modules on international strategy, global marketing, cross-border management, and entrepreneurship, but his questions always pushed further: How can nations like Nigeria reposition themselves in the global economy? What role must ethical leadership play in creating globally competitive yet locally grounded institutions? His professors frequently noted his ability to bridge classroom learning with pressing real-world questions of governance, business ethics, and national development.

Unlike many students who approached business management purely as a path to corporate advancement, ThisDaysMoses engaged it as a tool of national liberation. He argued that Nigeria's crisis was not a lack of resources but a lack of vision and structure, that with strategic international business principles, Nigeria could rebrand itself as an innovation hub, a trade leader, and a place where governance supports enterprise rather than crippling it. His research papers and case studies consistently highlighted African case contexts, offering bold yet practical strategies for harnessing Nigeria's human and material resources.

His time in London was also a cultural education. Engaging with colleagues from across Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Americas, he sharpened his appreciation for diversity and inclusivity in leadership. Class discussions became platforms where he compared Nigeria's struggles with models from other nations, dissecting both successes and failures to design context-specific solutions. This global exposure reinforced his conviction that Nigeria could learn from others while still charting its own authentic path of progress.

The MSc was not just an intellectual exercise; it became a proving ground for the fusion of vision, leadership, and strategy. It deepened his belief that business and governance are inseparable in shaping national destiny, that policies must create an enabling environment for enterprise, and businesses must reciprocate by contributing to social good. It was here that his conviction solidified: that Nigeria's rebirth would come from leaders who think globally but act locally, blending international standards with indigenous wisdom.

The University of East London did more than award him a degree, it expanded his horizon, sharpened his analytical lens, and strengthened his resolve to emerge not merely as a business leader, but as a transformational figure capable of aligning Nigeria's destiny with the best of global civilization.

Educational Background

PHD, PUBLIC POLICY UNIVERSITY COLLEGE DUBLIN, IRELAND.

The pursuit of a Doctor of Philosophy in Public Policy at University College Dublin marked the culmination of ThisDaysMoses' long academic and intellectual journey — a journey that began in the classrooms of Gbongan and matured across Africa, Asia, Europe, and North America. At UCD, one of Ireland's most prestigious institutions, he undertook not merely an academic program but a profound investigation into the dynamics of governance, civic trust, and institutional renewal.

For him, the PhD in Public Policy was more than a quest for scholarly distinction; it was an urgent response to Nigeria's crisis of leadership and the global challenge of declining trust in government. His research interrogated the intersection of technology, governance, and civic engagement, asking the critical question: How can nations rebuild civic trust in an era of widespread disillusionment with political institutions? This inquiry was not abstract. It was grounded in his lived experience as the leader of the Nigerian Liberty Movement (NLM) and the architect of LibertyApp, a digital platform designed to reconnect citizens with governance.

Through the program, he engaged deeply with theories of governance, comparative politics, institutional design, and ethical leadership. He analyzed case studies from established democracies and emerging states alike, probing the failures of traditional governance systems while proposing innovative frameworks tailored for Nigeria and Africa at large. Professors and peers at UCD often noted the rare combination of rigorous scholarship and activist urgency in his work: a scholar writing with the fire of a reformer, and a reformer thinking with the precision of a scholar.

The Irish context itself provided a powerful comparative lens. Ireland's history of colonial struggle, national renewal, and institution-building offered lessons and inspirations for Nigeria's own unfinished journey. Living and studying in Dublin, ThisDaysMoses was not only enriched academically but also sharpened culturally and politically, as he drew parallels between Ireland's path to stability and Nigeria's ongoing struggle for a just and functional democracy.

His doctoral research became a manifesto for purposeful national development, centered on three pillars: Emergency National Intervention, Self-Actualization of Every Citizen, and Restoration of Civic Trust through Technology and Ethical Governance. This framework has since become the intellectual backbone of NLM's vision and strategy, proving that the PhD was never an isolated academic endeavor but part of a larger mission to rewrite Nigeria's political destiny.

The PhD in Public Policy at UCD did not merely award him the highest academic honor; it affirmed his place as a thinker, reformer, and nation-builder. It equipped him with the intellectual depth, analytical rigor, and comparative insights needed to lead not only a political movement but a generational transformation. For ThisDaysMoses, the degree was not an end, but the sharpening of a lifelong mandate: to align scholarship with service, ideas with action, and leadership with the urgent demands of justice and human dignity.

PHD, PUBLIC POLICY UNIVERSITY COLLEGE DUBLIN, IRELAND.

Educational Background

PHD GOVERNMENT, POLITICAL THOUGHTS AND HISTORY HARVARD UNIVERSITY, CAMBRIDGE USA CANDIDATE

ThisDaysMoses' entry into Harvard University as a doctoral candidate in Government, Political Thought and History represents not only a personal academic triumph but also the unfolding of a historic mandate. At Harvard — the cradle of some of the world's foremost leaders, thinkers, and reformers — his intellectual journey finds its most rigorous and global stage.

The PhD program in Government at Harvard is not simply a space for academic inquiry; it is a laboratory of leadership where ideas are tested against history, philosophy, and real-world governance challenges. For ThisDaysMoses, the pursuit of this doctorate is directly tied to his mission of national renewal in Nigeria. His focus on Political Thought and History allows him to interrogate the philosophical roots of power, liberty, and justice, while simultaneously drawing lessons from historical struggles across civilizations. He approaches the discipline not as a detached scholar, but as a reformer seeking to translate knowledge into national rebirth.

His research interests converge on one pressing question: How can nations in democratic crisis rebuild legitimacy, restore civic trust, and craft political systems that genuinely reflect the will of the people? At Harvard, he engages with the foundational texts of political philosophy, from Plato and Hobbes to Fanon and contemporary African thinkers, analyzing how ideas about freedom, justice, and governance have shaped societies across time. He situates Nigeria's own political journey within this larger intellectual tradition, illuminating both its failures and its possibilities.

What distinguishes his candidacy is the unique fusion of scholarship and lived leadership. As National Leader of the Nigerian Liberty Movement (NLM), he brings to Harvard a laboratory of experience — a mass movement of over 66 million Nigerians demanding change. This practical engagement allows his research to move beyond abstraction, offering case studies rooted in LibertyApp, grassroots mobilization, and the struggle for democratic accountability in Nigeria. Professors and peers alike recognize in him a rare figure: a political actor who does not merely read history but is actively writing it.

Being at Harvard situates him within a global network of scholars, policymakers, and leaders. It challenges him to place Nigeria's struggles within the comparative framework of other nations that have transitioned from colonial subjugation, authoritarianism, or systemic corruption into stable democracies. The intellectual cosmopolitanism of Cambridge enriches his perspective, equipping him to see Nigeria not in isolation but as part of a global narrative of liberation and renewal.

For ThisDaysMoses, candidacy at Harvard is not merely a pursuit of academic prestige; it is a spiritual and historical duty. It represents the sharpening of his vision, the deepening of his analytical capacity, and the legitimization of his voice in global debates about governance, democracy, and justice. It affirms that his life's mission — to usher in a New Breed of Leaders, to champion Emergency National Intervention, and to restore dignity to every Nigerian — is not only a national calling but also an intellectual contribution to the world.

In his own words, Harvard is not the end of his journey but "a sacred ground of preparation — where the burden of a nation meets the responsibility of thought, and where the vision of a liberated Nigeria finds its intellectual armory."

Behold the Beginning Before the Beginning.

IF I ROSE, NIGERIA WOULD.

Once a security guard, standing in the shadows of buildings I could not enter. Now a liberator, standing at the gates of a nation I must rebuild. This picture is not shame, it is testimony: that grace makes men, and that destiny rewrites stories. If I rose, Nigeria would.

I was born into the margins of existence, the depths of deprivation, the pit of lack into a home where survival was the daily prayer and scarcity the daily bread. My father, a humbled prophet in a small local church, and my mother, a struggling farm trader, raised me in Gbongan, Osun State. My childhood was a cycle of hardship and hope: from home to school, from farm to church, and back again. That was life, every day, all day.

In my early childhood, at Primary 5, my father openly asked if I and my brother could find a way to raise our basic school fees through labor. That was the beginning of toiling. I became a load carrier an Alábàárù at Olufi Market in Gbongan. From there, I began scouting for ceremonies, hoping to beg for food or gather leftovers to take home.

The little breaks I found from the rigors of home were no rest they became the foundation of resilience. I carried planks from the bush to the truck path, my small frame bowed under the weight of wood heavier than my age. When that season ended, I labored in the local community cow butcher shop, drenched in sweat and blood, not of sacrifice but of survival. From there, I became a bike rider within my community, ferrying others while I myself searched for direction.

Still restless, still hungry, I left home and found myself in Ibadan, at Iwo Road. There I became a bus conductor not by dream but by necessity. The insults, the blows, the daily struggle at motor parks carved humility and endurance into my soul. And when even that path seemed too narrow, I ended up as a security guard, standing long hours in the night, paid too little to eat, guarding buildings I could never enter, watching lives I could never live.

But it was there in the obscurity of that gate at 805 Restaurant, Wuse 2, Abuja that God found me. Not as a pauper to remain in poverty, but as a vessel prepared in fire for a greater purpose. And that purpose was not just for me. It was for Nigeria.

For if grace can raise the son of a local prophet and a farm trader... if destiny can rewrite the story of a plank carrier, a butcher's boy, a bike rider, a bus conductor, and a security guard... then competence and compassion can raise Nigeria. If I rose, Nigeria would.

This is not my story alone. This is the Nigerian story: a people born with promise but shackled by poverty; a nation rich in resources yet treated as poor in destiny. But just as I was lifted, so too shall Nigeria be lifted. Just as grace rewrote my life, so shall providence rewrite our national story.

I am not ashamed of my past. My past is my proof. Proof that no man is too low to be lifted, no beginning too small to birth greatness, no story too broken to be rewritten by destiny.

If I rose, Nigeria would. And rise we must.

FOUNDER: LIBERTYAPP - NLM DIGITAL INFRASTRUCTURE THE SIX CIRCLES OF NIGERIA'S NATIONAL TRANSFORMATION

Founder of LibertyApp — The Six Circles of National Transformation

In every age, civilizations have risen when they built the tools to master their destiny. For China, it was WeChat; for the West, it was Silicon Valley; for India, it was Aadhaar. For Nigeria, the turning point is LibertyApp, the sovereign digital infrastructure founded by ThisDaysMoses.

LibertyApp is not another startup. It is a civilization-shaping platform, designed to dismantle mediocrity and build the digital backbone of Nigeria's rebirth. It operates across six powerful apps — each one targeting a pillar of national life. Together, they form the architecture of civic trust, economic empowerment, and cultural sovereignty.

1. Government

(Governance and Shadow Governance)

Connecting Nigerians to every electoral and appointed position of constituted authorities in Nigeria and running a parallel government on the other side of the app to show Nigerians and everyone how intentional leadership with capacity is supposed to be and how to run the country and set her on the path of peace and prosperity.

This app alone oversees and simulates the entire government of Nigeria — from the President to all the Ward Councillors. All the actions of the incumbent are published: all the good ones approved, all the wrong ones rejected, and solutions proffered in the interim.

(Nigerian Leaders are not yet ready to think about the fact that this platform is capable of upturning the table during the next general elections).

2. Politics

Only those in government can make a real-life national impact in a nation; the rest are just distractions. The duty of national transformation lies in the hand of those in power (Government). And you cannot get into Government democratically without Politics.

Therefore, ThisDaysMoses has brought in the era of Politics Unusual through the three major ingredients of emerging political leadership globally: Ideology, Capacity, and Anointing for Possibility.

With the 10 Hierarchical Order of Leadership and Structural Formation, LibertyApp is designed to mobilize 66 million+ persons through Empowerment, Digitization, and Political Activities.

Through this app, the step-by-step strategic engagements of emergence are well outlined. Here the NLM Constitution, Manifesto, Workbook, Brochure, Leadership Organogram, and the Budget of Liberty are hosted for public perusal.

3. Leadership

Every nation rises or falls by the inputs of the leaders that pilot the affairs of such a nation. Considering the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th industrial revolutions, Nigeria has always been left behind despite our endowment. Our worst nightmare is our retrogressive evolution.

All the facets of human endeavor have not had any great impact on Nigeria — from the Paleolithic Era to the Neolithic Revolution, to Civilization, to Colonization, to Modernization, and to this present Digital Age of the Anthropocene Epoch.

The people that have piloted the affairs of our motherland have not risen among their peers. We were not the only country that was colonized. After the colonization era, other countries went on to discover their purpose of existence, and inventions, innovations, and creativities of development became the order of the day — but Nigerian leaders went reveling.

This comes to mind:

"Woe to you, O land, when your king act childish with a servitude mentality, and your princes feast in the morning! But happy are you, O land, when your king is the son of the nobility, and your princes feast at the proper time, for strength, and not for drunkenness!"

We have come to instill the act of responsibility in every Nigerian. We have created a portal for every facet of human endeavor in Nigeria, and how real leaders can be helped to mount those podiums and bring the long-desired change in that country.

This is our divine assignment in this generation.

4. AskAGI

The Sovereign AI for Nigerian Relevance

Core Philosophy: Beyond Rivalry, Towards Sovereignty.

This is not about competing with global AI giants on their terms. It is about ensuring national relevance, digital survival, and cultural sovereignty. Our unassailable advantage is the Naija Contextual Layer — a deep, native understanding of the nuances that foreign AIs cannot grasp.

The Five Pillars of AskAGI:

Hyper-Local Intelligence: Mastery of Nigerian linguistic reality, including seamless code-switching between English, Pidgin, Yoruba, Igbo, and Hausa. This includes accent-inclusive voice tech that understands the Nigerian user perfectly.

Domain-Specific Problem Solvers: A suite of expert agents built for Nigeria's unique challenges:

LegalAGI: Demystifying Nigerian law and rights for citizens.

AgricAGI: Delivering hyper-local farming advice for Nigeria's ecological zones.

HealthNAIJA: Providing triage and information for Nigeria's most prevalent health issues.

FinanceAGI: Simplifying personal finance and market intelligence within the Nigerian context.

The Trust Engine: Combating misinformation by verifying news and deepfakes against local sources, and explaining complex government policies in clear, digestible terms.

The Cultural Engine: Amplifying Nigerian creativity by assisting Nollywood scriptwriters, Afrobeats musicians, and brands in generating authentic, culturally resonant content.

The Education Revolution (LearnNaija): Providing curriculum-aligned tutoring in local languages, and practical, step-by-step guides for skill acquisition tailored to the Nigerian market.

In essence, AskAGI is a public utility. It is the indispensable digital tool built to navigate, thrive, and solve problems within the unique complexity of the Nigerian reality.

It is AI that doesn't just speak English; it understands Naija.

5. Pubility

We are building Pubility, Nigeria's foundational digital public utility. It is a single platform designed to fully connect the country's economic and social potential.

The Core Problem: Nigeria's human economy is fragmented. Talent is disconnected from opportunity, service providers from clients, and sellers from buyers. Existing solutions are siloed, inadequate, and lack the contextual intelligence to serve the majority.

The Solution: A unified ecosystem where one user profile enables multiple economic identities:

The Job Seeker and The Employer

The Artisan and The Client

The Seller and The Buyer

The Professional and Their Network

This is not another app. It is essential infrastructure.

The Competitive Moat: AskAGI Integration

Pubility is powered by AskAGI, a sovereign AI trained on the Nigerian context. This is what makes it intelligent and trustworthy:

It understands Nigerian languages, slang, and code-switching.

It enables verification of identities, skills, and business credentials to create a trusted environment.

It provides hyper-intelligent matching, connecting people based on location, need, and reputation — not just keywords.

The Strategy: We will conquer the market one vertical at a time, starting with Skilled Artisans & Services, establishing an unassailable network effect before expanding into jobs, commerce, and social networking.

The Outcome: We move the nation's transactions and connections from scattered, untrusted channels (WhatsApp groups, street-side notices) into a single, efficient, and secure digital economy.

This is more than a company; it is a public utility for national growth.

6. Happenings

The Hyper-Local, Viral Social Fabric of Nigeria

The Concept: Happenings is the first social media platform designed to organize content and connection by Nigeria's 8,809 political wards. It is a fusion of TikTok's virality, Facebook's connectivity, and a hyper-local marketplace — all designed to monetize local culture and talent.

The Core Principle: While global platforms connect you to the world, Happenings connects you to your immediate world and your roots, creating a digital mirror of your real-life community.

How It Works:

The Ward-Based Feed:

The Default View: "My Ward"

Upon signing up, a user's primary feed is filled with content only from people in their specific political ward. They see videos from the local tailor, updates from the corner bakery, news from the community leader, and trends started by the school down the street.

Expanding the View:

Users can seamlessly switch their feed to see content from their LGA, State, or Nationally to go viral. This allows a talented dancer in Ibadan North-West Ward to become a star first in their ward, then their LGA, then all of Oyo State, and finally, across Nigeria.

Integration with the Ecosystem: The Power of One Account

Single Sign-On (SSO): One profile powers all platforms. Your Pubility profile (skills, services, verifications) is your Happenings profile.

AskAGI powers the experience: Translating local languages, moderating content, and recommending hyper-local trends.

Direct Integration:

From Happenings to Pubility: A user watching a video of a brilliant cake decorator in their ward can instantly see her Pubility service page, check her prices, and hire her without leaving the app.

From Pubility to Happenings: A job seeker on Pubility can be recommended to follow Happenings creators in their ward who work in their industry for networking and learning.

The "Earn" Function: Creators earn money through:

A built-in monetization program (ads revenue share for viral content).

Direct tipping from followers.

Selling goods/services directly through their integrated Pubility marketplace.

The Unbeatable Value Proposition:

For the User:

Reconnection to Roots: A digital town square for every community in Nigeria.

Discover Local Talent: Find the best photographer, musician, or chef right in your neighborhood.

Hyper-Relevant News: Get news and events that actually impact your immediate community.

For the Local Content Creator:

A Path to Fame and Income: You no longer need to compete with the entire world on TikTok to be seen. You can build a loyal, local audience first and monetize it directly.

Leverage Local Culture: Create content in your native language, using local slang and context, for an audience that gets it 100%.

For the System (Pubility/AskAGI):

Unprecedented Data: Understand trends, needs, and culture at the most granular level possible — the ward.

Unbreakable Network Effect: This creates the deepest, most culturally rooted ecosystem imaginable, making it impossible for foreign giants to replicate.

THRILLERS TRAVELS / THRILLERS TRAVEL EMPOWERMENT SCHEME (CSR) OF (TGI)

Thrillers Travels — Migrating Nigerians to the Western World on Eagle's Wing

When history recalls the early 21st century exodus of Nigerians, it will not only speak of desperation, poverty, or the collapse of governance. It will also speak of visionary migration — an organized, purposeful movement that carried thousands on eagle's wings into the Western world, orchestrated by ThisDaysMoses through Thrillers Travels.

This was not migration for escape, but for exposure. The goal was not merely to leave Nigeria but to rise above mediocrity through immersion in nations where excellence is law, where innovation is culture, and where systems actually work. Through Thrillers Travels, Moses personally sponsored over 3,000 Nigerians into the United Kingdom, Canada, the United States, Ireland, the United Arab Emirates, Germany, Indonesia, and China. Each one was a seed, strategically planted in fertile soil, destined to grow into a mighty oak of influence.

The philosophy was simple yet profound: Nigeria may not yet provide the stage for greatness, but greatness can be cultivated abroad, and in due time, brought back home. Just as China sent its brightest minds overseas to study, learn, and master foreign systems before calling them back to engineer its meteoric rise, Thrillers Travels was designed to replicate that model for Nigeria.

For those who passed through its gates, Thrillers Travels was never a travel agency — it was a divine vehicle of destiny. Families were reunited, students entered world-class universities, entrepreneurs tapped into international markets, and young professionals broke ceilings in industries they could only have dreamt of within Nigeria's borders. In every case, exposure became empowerment.

The deeper significance of this mission is only now becoming clear. Today, the technocratic cabinets of the Nigerian Liberty Movement (NLM) are led by the very men and women who were once lifted through Thrillers Travels. Doctors, engineers, scholars, entrepreneurs, financiers, and policy experts who once boarded planes with nothing but hope now stand as seasoned global actors, prepared to return and reconstruct Nigeria.

Thrillers Travels was the bridge. LibertyApp and the Legacy Societies are the destination. What began as a migration of survival has matured into a diaspora revolution. And now the call has gone forth: it is time to return. Time to rebuild. Time to make Nigeria great — not as an imitation of the West, but as a sovereign, self-respecting nation that has learned from the best of the world, just as China did.

In the end, Thrillers Travels will be remembered not for tickets booked or visas stamped, but for lives re-scripted, destinies awakened, and a nation prepared for its long-delayed renaissance. It was migration with a mission, flight with a future — Nigeria on eagle's wings.

FROM THRILLERS TRAVELS TO THE NIGERIAN LEGACY SOCIETIES

The migration wave orchestrated through Thrillers Travels was never accidental. It was deliberate, prophetic, and strategic. Every sponsorship, every ticket, every relocation was part of a larger design: to seed Nigeria's future leadership across the world's power centers.

What began as flights to London, Toronto, New York, Dubai, Berlin, Jakarta, and Beijing gradually transformed into something far more profound. The migrants who left through Thrillers Travels did not vanish into foreign anonymity. They became scholars in elite universities, professionals in leading industries, and entrepreneurs in global markets. And when the time came, they rallied back around the vision of national rebirth.

Thus were born the Nigerian Legacy Societies:
British Nigerian Legacy Society (BNLS) – Drawing from the thousands who settled in the UK, this society became a hub of policy, finance, and diaspora mobilization. From Oxford-trained scholars to NHS doctors, they represent a technocratic engine rooted in Britain's deep institutional knowledge.

American Nigerian Legacy Society (ANLS) – In the US, migrants flourished in technology, academia, and activism. This society channels American boldness, innovation, and democratic resilience into Nigeria's liberation blueprint.

Canadian Nigerian Legacy Society (CNLS) – Canada's culture of inclusion and governance excellence shaped many of Moses' protégés. Today, they form a disciplined cabinet of policy experts, educators, and social innovators.

Irish Nigerian Legacy Society (INLS) – Ireland, where Moses himself sojourned, became more than a safe haven. It became a launchpad for visionary leaders who blend Celtic resilience with Nigerian audacity.

German Nigerian Legacy Society (GNLS) – Rooted in precision, engineering, and discipline, the German chapter contributes the organizational backbone for industrialization and infrastructure.

Chinese Nigerian Legacy Society (ChNLS) – From Beijing to Shanghai, Nigerians trained in China learned the art of national reconstruction. They are the architects of Nigeria's coming industrial revolution, modeled after China's rise.

Arabian Nigerian Legacy Society (ArNLS) – In the UAE, Nigerians tapped into trade, logistics, and futuristic city-building. This chapter supplies the vision for Nigeria's leap into modern infrastructure and digital economy.

Together, these Societies are not social clubs. They are technocratic cabinets-in-waiting, organized governments outside government, aligned under the Nigerian Liberty Movement (NLM). Each society reflects the best of its host nation while remaining anchored in Nigerian destiny.

Analytically, this is one of the most radical political experiments in Africa's modern history. Where others see brain drain, ThisDaysMoses engineered a "brain bank" — a globally distributed but centrally directed pool of human capital, ready to re-enter Nigeria and rebuild her along tested, world-class models.

What China did in the late 20th century by recalling its diaspora, Nigeria is preparing to do now. But unlike China's centralized call, this movement already has its cabinets structured, its networks organized, its leaders tested abroad. When the time comes, they will not be starting from zero — they will be stepping into power as a trained, exposed, globally connected technocratic elite.

From Thrillers Travels to the Nigerian Legacy Societies, the circle is complete. What began as flights of hope has matured into a diaspora revolution — a government-in-exile, a parliament across borders, and a cabinet of the future.

THE CRUCIBLE OF CHANGE: THRILLERS HUMAN DEVELOPMENT FOUNDATION THUDEF

Long before the rise of LibertyApp and the global structures of the Nigerian Legacy Societies, Moses Olusoji Adebisi (ThisDaysMoses) began his humanitarian journey with the founding of the Thrillers Human Development Foundation (THUDEF). It was through this foundation that his earliest interventions in nation-building took shape. THUDEF was not designed as mere charity; it was a structural response to systemic failures, a deliberate attempt to empower the powerless and restore dignity to the marginalized.

1. Digital Literacy Mobilization – Liberating the Youth from Invisible Barriers

At a time when Nigeria had transitioned to computer-based testing (CBT) for national examinations such as WAEC and JAMB, millions of secondary school pupils were left stranded. They had never touched a computer, and the government had no plan to close this gap. Failure loomed, not because of lack of intelligence, but because of lack of exposure.

Moses stepped into this void. Through THUDEF, he mobilized teams across all thirty-six states of the federation to train final-year secondary school pupils in basic computer operations. Thousands of young Nigerians, who would have otherwise been victims of a failed system, gained the confidence to approach their examinations with dignity. This singular intervention broke the chain of exclusion and gave disadvantaged students a fighting chance.

2. Financial Inclusion for Low-Income Market Women — Dignity Through Capital

Nigeria's markets were filled with industrious women sustaining households and local economies, yet they remained invisible to banks, credit institutions, and government programs. They were trapped in cycles of poverty, not because they lacked ambition, but because they were locked out of access.

Through THUDEF, Moses identified these women in clusters across different states. They were trained, assessed, and then empowered with interest-free financial support ranging from ₦50,000 to ₦100,000 to scale their businesses. More than financial aid, this was capital given with dignity, designed to multiply productivity rather than create dependency.
In these women, he planted entrepreneurs; in their markets, he built micro-economies. His intervention demonstrated that true development must begin from the ground up, not the top down.

3. Equal Opportunity for All — Leveling the Playing Field
Beyond training and finance, THUDEF advanced the principle of justice in access. Moses created platforms that connected:
Job seekers to the right employers, both at home and abroad.
Artisans to those in need of their skills.
Sellers to buyers across regions and borders.

Every connection was not-for-profit, proving that empowerment was the goal, not exploitation. In a society where nepotism and corruption often decided destinies, THUDEF established a network of fairness where merit became the only qualification.

A Foundation for the Future
Thrillers Human Development Foundation was more than humanitarian outreach; it was the laboratory of Moses' nation-building vision. Through it, he pioneered digital inclusion, grassroots capitalism, and equal opportunity—principles that would later crystallize into his larger political and technological projects.

THUDEF became the prophetic foundation for the path that followed. It proved one enduring truth that defined his leadership: before a man can govern a nation, he must first serve its neglected souls.

THRILLERS HEALTH TECH CARE LTD (THE BREAKING EVEN)

In the trajectory of ThisDaysMoses journey, the founding of Thrillers HealthTech Care Ltd marked a critical stage, the point at which vision met sustainability. Co-founded with Dr. Peter Akanji and Dr. Babajide Oni, the company became a deliberate bridge between healthcare innovation and social impact. It was here that ThisDaysMoses transitioned from purely humanitarian interventions to strategic, scalable ventures that combined technology, care, and governance principles.

Thrillers HealthTech Care Ltd was conceived as more than a business. It was designed to address the chronic inefficiencies and fragmented services within the UK and global healthcare landscape, particularly in residential care for the elderly, disabled, and those with mental health challenges. Beyond care, the company integrated technology solutions, software services, and digital infrastructure aimed at optimizing operational effectiveness and creating measurable impact.

This stage of his career represented a critical turning point, the stage where ThisDaysMoses broke even. For the first time, his vision was not only changing lives but sustaining itself financially, demonstrating that socially-driven enterprises could achieve operational viability without compromising purpose. The break-even point was symbolic: it validated that strategic foresight, disciplined management, and the alignment of purpose with structure could produce tangible results.

Through this venture, ThisDaysMoses refined the principles that would later underpin larger projects: the integration of technology with human-centered solutions, a commitment to measurable social impact, and the ability to scale initiatives without losing integrity or focus. Thrillers HealthTech Care Ltd became both a laboratory and a proving ground, a space where innovative thinking, strategic collaboration, and disciplined execution intersected to create a sustainable force in healthcare and technology.

It was a milestone that underscored a recurring truth in ThisDaysMoses's journey: vision alone is not enough; it must be anchored in action, validated through results, and scaled with responsibility. In Thrillers HealthTech Care Ltd, he found the proof that his methods could transform sectors, sustain themselves, and prepare the foundation for even larger national and international interventions.

M&M THRILLERS HUMAN CARE LTD

Strategic Expansion: M&M Thrillers Human Care Ltd

In August 2022, ThisDaysMoses co-founded M&M Thrillers Human Care Ltd, a venture aimed at addressing the multifaceted challenges within the UK's residential care sector. This initiative was a strategic extension of his commitment to integrating technology with human-centered care.

Founding and Vision

The company was incorporated on 8 August 2022, with its registered office located at Flat 47 Samuel Building, 48 Shackleton Way, London, E16 2JT. The founding team comprised ThisDaysMoses, who served as the President and Director; Treasure Adebisi, the Marketing Director; Michael Armah, an Administrator; Sinthia Dassi, an Administrator; and Veronica Graham, the Company Secretary. Together, they envisioned a company that would not only provide residential care services but also innovate within the sector.

Operational Focus

M&M Thrillers Human Care Ltd specialized in residential care activities for individuals with learning difficulties, mental health issues, and substance abuse challenges. This focus was in line with ThisDaysMoses's broader objective of creating inclusive and sustainable care solutions that cater to underserved populations.

Challenges and Strategic Decisions

Despite the company's promising start, it faced operational challenges that impacted its sustainability. After careful consideration, the decision was made to dissolve the company. On 9 January 2024, M&M Thrillers Human Care Ltd was officially dissolved. This decision was not taken lightly but was a strategic move to reallocate resources and focus on more scalable and impactful initiatives.

Legacy and Learnings

The experience gained from M&M Thrillers Human Care Ltd provided invaluable insights into the complexities of the healthcare sector. It reinforced the importance of adaptability and strategic planning in the face of challenges. The lessons learned from this venture informed Moses's subsequent projects, including the establishment of Thrillers HealthTech Care Ltd, which continues to innovate at the intersection of healthcare and technology.

MAIPROPERTY NIGERIA, UAE AND USA

Building Global Real Estate Footprints: MAIProperty

In the continuum of ThisDaysMoses's entrepreneurial journey, the founding of MAIProperty represents a decisive step into global real estate and infrastructure development. This venture was not merely about acquiring or selling properties; it was an articulation of vision—a deliberate strategy to leverage real estate as a tool for economic empowerment, urban transformation, and global connectivity.

MAIProperty was conceived with the foresight to operate across multiple continents, establishing residential, commercial, and mixed-use properties in strategic urban hubs. From London to Dubai, from Abuja to Lagos, and extending to North America, ThisDaysMoses envisioned a network of properties that were more than structures—they were nodes of opportunity, investment, and urban modernization. Each property was strategically positioned to serve not only as a source of revenue but as a platform for socio-economic influence, providing both lifestyle solutions and investment security.

Strategic Vision and Operational Framework

At the core of MAIProperty is a model that integrates global real estate best practices with local contextual intelligence. Every project is evaluated not merely by financial ROI but by its potential to catalyze economic activity, create jobs, and elevate urban standards. ThisDaysMoses personally led the architectural and investment planning, ensuring that each property met the highest international benchmarks for safety, sustainability, and design aesthetics.

Residential Properties: These were crafted to provide premium living experiences, blending security, comfort, and connectivity. Each development considered the local socio-economic environment, targeting expatriates, professionals, and upwardly mobile residents, while ensuring affordability and accessibility for wider communities in select regions.

Commercial Properties: Recognizing the role of commercial hubs in national and global economies, MAIProperty invested in offices, retail spaces, and business parks designed to foster entrepreneurship, attract multinational firms, and create microeconomic ecosystems that ripple benefits to local communities.

Mixed-Use Developments: In line with Moses's vision for purposeful national development, mixed-use projects integrated residential, retail, and leisure components. These developments were conceived as miniature urban ecosystems, where work, life, and culture coalesce, creating sustainable urban nodes that mirror global city models.

Global Reach, Local Impact

MAIProperty is not simply a real estate company; it is a strategic instrument of global engagement. ThisDaysMoses's approach was to combine the financial security of property investment with the socio-political potential of urban influence. Every property was a node in a larger matrix, connecting diaspora investors, local entrepreneurs, and international stakeholders. Through these developments, MAIProperty positioned itself as a conduit for Nigerians and Africans to access global urban infrastructure while retaining cultural and economic ties to home.

Legacy and Strategic Significance

Through MAIProperty, ThisDaysMoses demonstrated that entrepreneurship can be both profitable and transformative. Each property became more than a dwelling or office—it was an emblem of possibility, a manifestation of strategic foresight, and a bridge between continents. MAIProperty exemplifies ThisDaysMoses's broader philosophy: that national progress, personal empowerment, and global relevance are inseparable when ambition is combined with vision, strategy, and purposeful execution.

In the broader arc of his life, MAIProperty stands as a testament to ThisDaysMoses's ability to translate insight into infrastructure, vision into tangible assets, and strategy into enduring impact—creating not just buildings, but a blueprint for transnational growth and generational wealth.

THE LIGHT IN THE CAMP

The journey of destiny often passes through stages of preparation, where a man is tested not by thrones but by the tents of his peers. For ThisDaysMoses, the crucible of such testing was the National Youth Service Corps (NYSC), the one-year mandatory service for all Nigerian graduates. Yet, what was for many a routine civic duty became for him a stage of divine manifestation.

In the year of his service, providence stationed him in the NYSC Orientation Camp at Okada, Edo State. There, amid the drills, parades, and camaraderie, a light began to shine. His peers, discerning the mantle upon him, entrusted him with leadership: he became the Camp President, the visible voice at every public engagement, the one to welcome dignitaries and represent the corps before visiting officials. But beyond the podium, his calling was deeper. Each dawn, before the soldiers blew the bugle, he gathered his colleagues in morning devotions, leading them into the presence of God with a voice that carried both fire and tenderness. By night, when laughter and culture filled the air, he served as Social Coordinator, curating joy, unity, and fraternity among diverse tribes of Nigeria.

After thirty days, he was officially redeployed to Thrillers Human Development Foundation (THUDF) in Abuja for his Primary Place of Assignment (PPA), where he continued his service for the remaining eleven months. In THDF, his leadership merged civic duty with humanitarian vision, demonstrating that his life was never confined to personal ambition, but always tethered to the service of people.

By the time of his Passing-Out Parade, one truth had become evident: he was not just another corps member. He was the choice and the voice of the people, a young man whose name echoed within his service region, remembered not for compliance but for charisma, compassion, and courage. In the NYSC, a generation had already seen in him as commented by Oluwatobi T&T of the Platoon 4, a foreshadowing of the liberator he would become for Nigeria.

The Covenant of Love

It was not by chance, but by the orchestration of heaven, that ThisDaysMoses met the love of his life. While on a prophetic assignment in 2017, at the Nnamdi Azikiwe International Airport, Abuja, destiny staged its divine introduction. Alhaja Barakat, then en route to Saudi Arabia, encountered him in the posture of prayer, interceding for her colleagues. In that sacred moment, the aura of providence descended, and their spirits connected. Immediately, ThisDaysMoses knew: "This is bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh, the one destined to walk this path of liberation with me."

Their union was sealed in stages, echoing both tradition and modernity, the traditional rites first, on 18th January 2018, followed by the solemnity of the court wedding, and finally crowned in the splendor of the white wedding. It was a covenant of purpose, not just of companionship, ordained to produce a family that embodies both faith and vision.

Now known as Hajiah (Barrister) Treasure Barakat Adebisi, she is not only a loving wife and mother but also a learned fellow. She obtained her BSc in Business Administration from UNAD (University of Ado Ekiti), an LLB from TCD (Trinity College Dublin), alongside several professional certifications from prestigious institutions. She has become a force in her own right: the proud owner of LilM, the elite-class fashion brand featured in Harold's and other world-class stores, and the visionary founder of Treasure Home of Beauty, a global cosmetics empire headquartered in London and Toronto. A lover of God and a servant of the people, she mirrors her husband's mission by redefining beauty, dignity, and empowerment for women across nations.

Together, ThisDaysMoses and Barrister Hajiah Treasure Barakat are blessed with six radiant children, Myra, Mayor, Merrilyn, Myles, Markis, and Marya, each a living testimony of divine fruitfulness and the continuity of a liberator's legacy.

THE VOICE BEYOND BORDERS

Since 2012, when many of his contemporaries were only beginning to chart their paths, ThisDaysMoses had already stepped into the labor market of destiny. But unlike others who merely sought survival, he pursued learning, vision, and positioning. Through study, reflection, and relentless action, he allowed providence to shape him into what he is today: a political, social, and religious reformation agent for Nigeria and Africa.

His journey was never confined to the borders of Nigeria. The resonance of his message, the urgent call for justice, equity, and the rebuilding of civic trust, echoed across continents. He became a voice on major international platforms, appearing in the BBC, and participating in high-level meetings and programs in the United Kingdom, the United States, Ireland, Canada, Germany, Indonesia, and many other nations. In each country, his message remained clear: Africa, and Nigeria in particular, must be liberated from the absurdities that have crippled its system of governance.

Central to his intellectual intervention was his groundbreaking book, Exposing the Absurdities in the Nigerian System of Government, a bold testament that challenged both the ruling elite and the masses to confront their complicity in Nigeria's decline. His words traveled beyond the written page, finding expression on major television networks, at international conferences, and in press briefings that drew coverage from virtually all the national dailies in Nigeria.

Every appearance, every speech, every media engagement was more than publicity. It was a signpost of divine positioning — evidence that the liberator had been prepared not just for Nigeria but for the world stage. What others called platforms, providence had ordained as pulpits of prophecy, where he would declare the coming transformation of a nation long held in chains.

The uncensored images of these engagements, scattered across nations and moments, tell their own story: the rise of a man not seeking fame, but carrying a mandate; not chasing relevance, but embodying destiny.

THE ENVISIONED NEW NIGERIA THROUGH NIGERIAN LIBERTY MOVEMENT NLM UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF THISDAYSMOSES

The Envisioned New Nigeria Through Nigerian Liberty Movement (NLM) under the Leadership of ThisDaysMoses

Part A: Why Did He Decided to Step into National Affairs?

Few of the Man-Made Evils Perpetrated Towards Nigerian by Nigerians.

ThisDaysMoses did not enter the national space because politics was fashionable. He stepped in because Nigeria had bled too long, and silence had become betrayal.

Since independence in 1960, Nigeria has buried tens of millions of her own children not merely in the battlefield of war, but in the quiet graveyards of neglect. The civil war alone (1967–1970) claimed an estimated six million lives, many of them children who died of starvation. In more recent times, Boko Haram insurgency and banditry have left over 1,350,000 people dead and displaced more than 13.2 million Nigerians. Beyond the violence, maternal mortality has made Nigeria the second-worst in the world, with about 82,000 women dying annually in childbirth most of them deaths that could have been prevented with basic healthcare. Malaria, typhoid, and cholera still kill tens of thousands every year, not because cures do not exist, but because the government failed to provide them.

At the same time, trillions of naira have disappeared from the nation's treasury. Former military ruler Sani Abacha alone was confirmed to have stolen and stashed away more than $5 billion, part of which has been repatriated in bits from Switzerland, Jersey, and the US. Between 1999 and 2015 now extended to the third quarter of 2025, according to World Bank and Transparency International reports, over $1Trillion in oil revenue and other mineral resources simply vanished through corruption and mismanagement. To put this in perspective, $1Trillion could have built modern railways, world-class hospitals, 500,000MW of electricity, and transformed Nigeria into a first-world country. Instead, it built mansions in Dubai, London, and Maryland for politicians, while the ordinary Nigerian sank deeper into perpetual hopelessness.

ThisDaysMoses often described Nigeria's tragedy as retrogressive evolution: the nation moves not forward but backward. In 1960, Nigeria's naira was stronger than the US dollar. By 2024, it collapsed past ₦1,500 to $1, making it almost worthless. The people have moved from best to better, from better to worse, and from worse to worst.

The collapse is not just economic; it is moral. Nigeria has become a jungle, a zone of the survival of the fittest. The hope of the people in the system has been dashed completely. Courts no longer deliver justice but trade it to the highest bidder. Police officers extort motorists in broad daylight. Leaders take money meant for hospitals and send their families abroad for healthcare. They steal education budgets, then post pictures of their children graduating from Harvard and Oxford.

In such a society, even the common man has been corrupted. A mechanic removes parts from the car he is paid to repair. A house help keeps a portion of the money he is sent to spend. Market women cheat on measurements. Civil servants inflate figures. Contractors abandon projects. From top to bottom, the system has forced Nigerians to become the opposite of who they truly are, look around is any lady happily engaged in prostitution, has Nigeria been fair to those that has resulted into petty scamming called yahoo yahoo among our boys.

This is why he, ThisDaysMoses, could no longer stay silent. He stepped into the national space because Nigeria has been reduced to ruins by Nigerians themselves not by foreigners. The leaders entrusted with food, shelter, education, and security have used the people's wealth to escape the rot they themselves planted. And while they fled abroad, the rest of the country was left in hunger, sickness, and despair.

For him, stepping into national affairs was not ambition it was duty. It was the cry of the millions who have died avoidable deaths. It was the burden of the trillions looted without trace. It was the voice of the ordinary Nigerian, betrayed, broken, and bleeding.

ThisDaysMoses chose to step in because Nigeria is no longer simply misgoverned Nigeria is at risk of death. And he has committed himself to be the liberator who restores her life.

Nigeria's Retrogression vs. Others' Progress

What makes Nigeria's tragedy even more painful is not only what has been lost internally, but what has been lost in comparison to other nations. In 1960, when Nigeria gained independence, the country had a GDP per capita of about $93, while South Korea's was $82 poorer than Nigeria. Today, South Korea's GDP per capita is over $32,000, while Nigeria's is barely $2,400. The difference is almost twentyfold.

The same is true of Singapore. At independence in 1965, Singapore was a swampy island with no resources, depending heavily on Malaysia for survival. Yet through visionary leadership and strict governance, Singapore's GDP per capita now exceeds $65,000, while Nigeria blessed with oil, gas, fertile land, and a massive population remains among the poorest in the world.

The United Arab Emirates was once a desert, its people living in tents and fishing villages. But within half a century, the UAE has become a hub of tourism, finance, and innovation, with Dubai standing as one of the most developed cities on earth. In contrast, Nigeria, with far greater resources and human capital, still cannot keep its lights on or provide potable water to millions of its citizens.

These comparisons make it clear: Nigeria's problem has never been destiny; it has always been leadership. Other nations with fewer resources, harsher climates, and smaller populations have risen to greatness. Nigeria, with abundance in every corner, has been brought low by greed, corruption, and the deliberate betrayal of her own people.

ThisDaysMoses often points to these examples not to shame Nigeria, but to awaken her. For if South Korea could rise, if Singapore could transform, if the UAE could reinvent itself, then Nigeria with all her potential can do even greater. But only if leadership is reclaimed by men and women who see governance as service, not as plunder.

It is this conviction, sharpened by history and burdened by compassion, that drove him to step into national affairs. He could not watch Nigeria bleed while others soared. He could not stand by while the giant of Africa crawled in the dust.

For him, the rise of Nigeria is not just possible it is inevitable, if the right choices are made. And under the banner of Liberty, those choices will be made.

Part B. The Envisioned New Nigeria Through NLM Under the Leadership of ThisDaysMoses

Our Approach: Emergency National Intervention, Self-Actualization of Every Citizens and Purposeful National Development through the 7 Pillars of World Economic Dominance

Blueprint Summary Table

Pillar	Core Focus	Nigeria's Current Reality	Global Comparison	Action Plan (TDM Vision)	Projected Impact (4 Years)
1. People's Based Policies & Functional Governance	Policy audit, digital accountability	Duplicated budgets, ₦4T leakages yearly	Estonia digitized all gov't services, saving billions	Create National Digital Accountability Portal, repeal harmful policies, strengthen beneficial ones	Recover ₦4T annually, rebuild trust
2. National Psyche Reengineering	Civic, moral, and future identity education	Fatalism, corruption normalized	Singapore rebuilt national psyche post-1965	Launch Future Nigeria Labs & compulsory civic-tech education	National unity, reduction in corruption culture
3. National Containment & Global Dependency	Reduce imports, create exports	$30B lost annually (fuel, food, health, education imports)	China became factory of the world	Domestic refining, local pharma, food production	Save $20B annually, export leadership
4. Resources Repossession & Production	Natural & human resources harnessing	$100B+ looted abroad, 133M in poverty	UAE built global wealth from oil; Botswana from diamonds	Create National Asset Reclamation Agency, modular refineries	50% poverty reduction, youth employment surge
5. Financial Recalibration	Sovereign financial independence	65% unbanked adults, ₦6T lost in tax evasion	London/Dubai = global financial hubs	Sovereign Wealth Expansion Fund, diaspora bonds	$50B capital mobilized yearly
6. Technological Immersion	Infrastructure, education, health, industry	4,000MW power vs. 20,000MW needed	China: 25,000km high-speed rail	25,000km rail, 20,000MW power, telemedicine rollout	7%+ GDP growth, 20M out of poverty
7. Sovereignty & Defense	Military, judiciary, trade, resettlement	$700M crude theft monthly, slow judiciary	Israel = self-reliant defense	Local arms plants, special courts, resettlement of IDPs	Stop crude theft, justice in 6 months, security restored

Comparative Insight: Nigeria vs. Peers

Country (1960s)	GDP Per Capita (1960s)	GDP Per Capita Today	Key Strategy	Nigeria's Current GDP Per Capita
South Korea	$82	$32,000+	Education, tech, exports	~$2,400
Singapore	$500	$65,000+	Anti-corruption, trade hub	~$2,400
UAE	<$500	$47,000+	Oil to innovation	~$2,400
Nigeria	$93	~$2,400	Resource curse, corruption	–

Nations with fewer resources overtook Nigeria through vision, discipline, and governance.

ASSURANCE: Nigeria is Not Irreparable

- Reparations: Nigeria has over $1T in stolen assets abroad (World Bank est.).
- Resource Potential: 37B barrels oil, 209T cubic ft gas, lithium, gold, iron ore.
- Human Capital: 220M citizens, 70% under 35.
- Diaspora Strength: 17M Nigerians abroad remit $20B yearly.

→ With a comprehensive recovery and mobilization strategy, ThisDaysMoses projects $211B raised in the first 6 months without loans or aid.

Timeline of Action

Phase	Duration	Key Deliverables
Emergency National Intervention	0–6 months	Raise $211B, recover loots, stabilize naira, begin infrastructure rollout
Reconstruction Phase	6–12 months	200,000MW power target, digital governance portal live, first 250,000km rail projects launched
Expansion Phase	Year 2–3	Industrial zones operational, local refineries refining 100% crude, IDP resettlement complete
Dominance Phase	Year 4	Nigeria becomes Africa's financial, cultural, and industrial hub; GDP growth 70–100%

Final Word of Assurance

ThisDaysMoses maintains: One administration is enough to transform Nigeria. The examples of Singapore under Lee Kuan Yew, UAE under Sheikh Zayed, and South Korea under Park Chung-hee prove that visionary leadership within one generation can rewrite a nation's destiny.

All Nigeria needs is a chance. And he asks only once try him for one term, and history itself will testify.
